Woman Hundred Years Old in London, Knew Nothing of Great War

LONDON, Sept. 6.—Although she had lived in a suburb of London during the past five years and had been through numerous German air raids, Miss Charlotte Frisby, of Tottenham, has just died at the age of 100 years and eight months without knowing that there had been a war.

Fearing the effort, because of her advanced age, Miss Frisby's relatives kept all news of the conflict from her.

The crime was committed in 1894, according to the charge. The body of the girl, after she was strangled to death, was found hidden in a dense woods.

Dutch Village to Be Built On the Bottom of the Ocean

NEW YORK, Sept. 6.—Holland has decided to drain the Zuider Zee, and in the next five years four acres of Dutch villages will be built upon what is now the bottom of the sea.

The Zuider Zee has been a good little sea for such salty phenomena as Atterp, a village of 1,000 inhabitants, according to Hendrik Willem Van Loon, a Dutch scholar and historian.
